

Huge meta-project on sharing and stuff

Thomas Levine <http://thomaslevine.com>

Me

- Computers, ergonomics, "data", &c.
- I came for Software Freedom Kosovo
- Why I can whimsically spend two weeks in the Balkans

My strange views on work

Work is overrated

Looking for work is too much work

I don't really like talking about computers

A tangent: Computer things that I suggest learning

How to write things emacs, vim, or text manipulation in shell

Better than DropBox basics of scp, sftp, or rsync

Maybe some good email programs mutt, pine, not-much, mh, &c.

A fun thing I do with computers

Agency

I tell computers to remember things for me.

Strange things I share

Advantages of sharing these things

Summary

1. Work is overrated.
2. I like when computers help me do fun things, but I otherwise find computers reasonably boring.
3. Neat things happen when people share information.